

Penn State International Law Review

Volume 6
Number 2 Dickinson Journal of International Law

Article 2

1988

Preface

Follow this and additional works at: <http://elibrary.law.psu.edu/psilr>

Part of the International Law Commons

Recommended Citation

(1988) "Preface," Penn State International Law Review: Vol. 6: No. 2, Article 2.
Available at: <http://elibrary.law.psu.edu/psilr/vol6/iss2/2>

This Front Matter is brought to you for free and open access by Penn State Law eLibrary. It has been accepted for inclusion in Penn State International Law Review by an authorized administrator of Penn State Law eLibrary. For more information, please contact ram6023@psu.edu.

Preface

This issue of the Journal marks the début of our Winter edition. Continuing our search for excellence, the editorial staff has worked extremely long and hard hours to give this inaugural issue a proper introduction.

Our feature article on German occupational safety and health regulation is sure to be the seminal writing on the subject. Cogently, lucidly and provocatively, Kenneth Kilimnik discusses the West German workers compensation system from an American perspective. Certainly, it is to be an invaluable resource to academics and practitioners alike. Finally, two extensive student comments complete the issue. One examines the principle of religious liberty and the practice of states, and the other the problem of inadequate legislation governing the international kidnapping of children.

Bernard M. Rethore
Editor-in-Chief

The editors of the Dickinson Journal of International Law are pleased to dedicate this issue to Joseph B. Kelly, the Elsie de R. Orlando and Samuel P. Orlando Distinguished Professor of Law. Professor Kelly has served as teacher and scholar at the Dickinson School of Law for almost twenty years. We dedicate this, our first winter issue, to Professor Kelly in recognition of his encouragement and support in the founding of this international law journal. The following inscription reveals the diverse interests and generous spirit so characteristic of Professor Kelly. His unobtrusive availability is his gift to us all.